In Vergil's Aeneid, the poet implies that those who have been initiated into mystery cults enjoy a blessed situation both in life and after death. This collection of essays brings new insight to the study of mystic cults in the ancient world, particularly those that flourished in Magna Graecia (essentially the area of present-day Southern Italy and Sicily). Implementing a variety of methodologies, the contributors to Mystic Cults in Magna Graecia examine an array of features associated with such "mystery religions" that were concerned with individual salvation through initiation and hidden knowledge rather than civic cults directed toward Olympian deities usually associated with Greek religion. Contributors present contemporary theories of ancient religion, field reports from recent archaeological work, and other frameworks for exploring mystic cults in general and individual deities specifically, with observations about cultural interactions throughout. Topics include Dionysos and Orpheus, the Goddess Cults, Isis in Italy, and Roman Mithras, explored by an international array of scholars including Giulia Sfamini Gasparro ("Aspects of the Cult of Demeter in Magna Graecia") and Alberto Bernabé ("Imago Inferorum Orphica"). The resulting volume illuminates this often misunderstood range of religious phenomena.

This work is essentially the story of a young boy entering his teenage years, a shy, reserved, introspective, un-talkative individual. For the first time in my life, I began to feel emotions that I didn't understand. Poetry was a medium that helped me discover and explore these feelings that were so different than anything else that I had ever experienced. Sadness, loss, happiness, love and hate among many others were some of the emotions that I was experiencing. As I struggled to come to grips with them, I found great therapeutic relief in expressing myself through written words. I found that making the effort to put these emotions into words provided me with relief and solace. The most important lesson that I have learned is that while experiencing difficult emotions, it is absolutely critical to never let those emotions be misplaced and to never allow myself to feel something without making an effort to understand that feeling. Throughout my life, I have never found the courage to share these thoughts and experiences with anyone. Thank you for allowing me to share them with you and I sincerely hope that everyone who reads my poetry will find some inspiration (whatever it may be) and possibly derive some benefit for themselves.
